Part F: Reading Comprehension

Directions: In this part of the test, you will read three passages. Each passage is followed by four questions. Answer the questions by choosing the best choice (1), (2), (3), or (4). Then mark your answer sheet.

PASSAGE 1:

National Park in India is home to two of the world's most endangered species: the tiger and the single-horned rhino. Photographer Steve Winter and writer Douglas Chadwick had only been working there a few days when they had a rather frightening close shave with some rhinos.

They were driving into the park to start filming, when their guide stopped the jeep to move a turtle from the middle of the road just ahead of them. Winter, Chadwick and their guard got out to stretch their legs and watch. But when Chadwick turned to look up the road, he saw something terrible.

About 50 meters away, a rhino was charging at them. Rhinos can sprint at more than 40 kilometers an hour, so there was no time to leap back in the car. Instinctively, the guard fired a shot into the ground just in front of the rhino. The crack of the rifle and the dirt that the bullet kicked up was enough to distract their attacker and he veered off into the grass seconds before reaching them.

Shaken, but relieved the incident had not been worse, they drove on. As they were entering the forest area on a raised section of road, three young rhinos climbed onto the road in front of them. The jeep stopped hurriedly, but this time the animals seemed uninterested and disappeared into the forest. Just then, however, the mother of the three, who had been keeping an eye on her young, came crashing through the trees from their left. No time to shoot this time. The female rhino slammed into the side of the jeep and started to wrestle it off the road. Indian rhinos don't use their horns in a fight; instead they bite and this female's teeth were gouging deep into the side of the jeep.

- 156- It can be inferred from the passage that the tiger and the single-horned rhino -----.
- 1) cause the most danger to those visiting the National Park in India
 - 2) are some animal species that might go extinct, if not protected
 - 3) cannot be found anywhere in India except in a confined area
 - 4) compete with one another for survival
- 157- What did Chadwick look at in fright when he got out of the car to relax a bit?
- 1) A ferocious animal attacking him and those accompanying him
 - 2) Their guard shooting an animal that had blocked the road
 - 3) A rhino escaping into the grass close to them
 - 4) A turtle lying in front of their jeep
- 158- Why has the author referred to the fact that rhinos can sprint at more than 40 kilometers an hour?
- 1) To express surprise at the running speed of such big animals
 - 2) To show that just as animals follow their instincts so humans may act irrationally at times
 - 3) To prove that human intellect can easily outsmart animals no matter how fast and dangerous they are
 - 4) To explain why the guard fired a shot into the ground just in front of the rhino instead of getting into the car
- 159- Which of the following best describes the three young rhinos' reaction to the presence of Steve Winter and Douglas Chadwick and their guide?
- 1) Curiosity
 - 2) Delight
 - 3) Indifference
 - 4) Affability

160- Which of the following is true about the female rhino mentioned in paragraph 3?

- 1) She was not afraid of gunshots.
- 2) She pushed the jeep off the road.
- 3) She made an attack to let her young run away.
- 4) She unexpectedly used her horns in the fight she started.

PASSAGE 2:

Something momentous happened in conservation circles last month in Ecuador. At the UN Convention on Migratory Species conference, a resolution was passed recognizing that some social mammals have culture. Sure, the idea of non-human culture has been around for years. But this is the first time that it has been formally recognized by an international treaty. And beyond acknowledging that it isn't just humans that have socially learned traditions, this treaty opens up a new frontier for efforts to conserve social species.

What is non-human culture? A popular definition is information or a behavior—shared by population or subpopulation—acquired from others of the same species via social learning. What this means for conservation, which often treats a species as homogeneous, is that culture can create boundaries between social groups, affecting behavior, gene flow and resource use.

In 1975 sociobiologist E. O. Wilson explained the influence of social structure on fitness, gene flow and spatial patterns in some species. Deeper understanding only started to emerge in the past decade, and wildlife policy has been slow to catch up.

The new resolution recognizes both positive and negative consequences of non-human culture. Individuals passing on knowledge may increase population viability by allowing the rapid spread of innovations amid environmental challenges, which could mean more resilient social groups. On the other hand, the effects of human-induced threats may be amplified by the presence of non-human culture. How so? The type of threat and the type of society is important.

161- What does the word "it" in paragraph 1 refer to?

- 1) treaty
- 2) UN Convention
- 3) culture
- 4) idea of non-human culture

162- It can be understood from the passage that the belief that some animal species have culture -----.

- 1) is more likely to bring more damage than benefit to them
- 2) was not entirely new before the UN Convention on Migratory Species conference
- 3) made wildlife policy makers around the world quickly change their wildlife protection approaches
- 4) may lead to an increased level of population viability among animal species with a supposedly strong social culture

163- Why does the author mention sociobiologist E. O. Wilson in paragraph 3?

- 1) To lend credence to a point raised in paragraph 2
- 2) To shed more light on the definition of non-human culture
- 3) To discuss the consequences of the acceptance of non-human cultures
- 4) To explain what is meant by fitness, gene flow and spatial patterns

164- According to paragraph 4, more resilient social groups directly stem from -----.

- 1) environmental challenges
- 2) increased population viability
- 3) rapid spread of innovations
- 4) individuals passing on knowledge

165- The passage would most probably continue with a discussion of -----.

- 1) how a non-human culture emerges in the course of time
- 2) the similarities between human societies and those of animal species that are believed to possess culture
- 3) some variables having a bearing on the relationship between the presence of non-human culture and the effects of human-induced threats
- 4) the reasons why human-induced threats are likely to affect non-human cultures both positively and negatively

PASSAGE 3:

The food industry loves a buzzword. And, increasingly, those buzzwords revolve around health. Healthy eating is big business—why do you think everything is labeled as high protein these days? But while protein content is objective, there is no official definition of a “superfood” and the EU has thankfully banned health claims on packaging, unless they are supported by scientific evidence.

However, that hasn’t stopped many food brands from funding research to help promote the health benefits of their product. For example, if you see a headline proclaiming the health benefits of bananas, chances are the research was funded by some strange organization like the British Banana Council. They’re susceptible to bias, basically.

The idea that there are ingredients that vastly outperform other foods, and can somehow stave off cancer, heart disease and other major health concerns is misleading—if not a complete lie. Sadly, some people want to believe that eating a certain fruit or vegetable containing an antioxidant or essential fatty acid is a health panacea that can offset the effects of their Dominoes or their missed spin session.

The problem is that most research on superfoods tests chemicals and extracts in concentrations not found in the food in its natural state. In short: they’re good for you, yes, but to curb cancer you’d have to eat them by the wheelbarrow full.

The main foods, though, that have been elevated to superfood status in recent years are those rich in antioxidants. Antioxidants are chemicals thought to protect us against the harmful effects of free radicals, which are chemicals naturally produced in every living cell and known to cause cell damage—linked to ageing and disease development. However, evidence about this and other health benefits of antioxidants is inconclusive. A review of the research into this topic in 2011 by the European Food Safety Authority (EFSA) found no evidence that the antioxidant action on free radicals observed in the lab was of any benefit to human health. Sorry to burst your bubble.

166- What is the primary purpose of the passage?

- 1) To promote health products
- 2) To criticize people’s credulity
- 3) To correct a misunderstanding
- 4) To admonish scientists for their carelessness

167- Which of the following best describes the function of paragraph 2 in relation to paragraph 1?

- 1) Paragraph 2 shows that even the EU precautionary regulation is often neutralized in some way.
- 2) Paragraph 2 purports to demonstrate that the EU measure, as described in paragraph 1, is just beginning to bear fruits.
- 3) Paragraph 2 calls into question the sincerity of the EU which, according to paragraph 1, seemingly intends to prevent fraud.
- 4) Paragraph 2 is intended to show the positive effect of EU monitoring, mentioned in paragraph 1, on the companies promoting food brands.

168- The phrase “stave off” in paragraph 3 could best be replaced by -----.

- 1) cure
- 2) diagnose
- 3) deter
- 4) trigger

169- According to paragraph 4, you can hope to prevent cancer when you eat allegedly beneficial superfoods -----.

- 1) under tightly controlled laboratory conditions
- 2) only after they have been well researched
- 3) in their natural state only
- 4) in very great quantities

170- Which of the following best describes the authors’ attitude towards the positive effect which antioxidants are said to have?

- 1) Amusement
- 2) Astonishment
- 3) Skepticism
- 4) Pointed disagreement
